PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED VOIR DIRE QUESTIONS

1. Does anyone here follow Charles Johnson online—on social media, podcasts, or anything like that?
2. Has anyone here ever gotten in trouble at work or school for something they said—online, in an email, or in a conversation?
3. Has anyone ever been accused of defamation or saying something harmful about someone else?
4. If false words caused real damage to someone's career or business, would you still hesitate to award millions because it wasn't a physical injury?
5. If the facts support it, would you have a hard time awarding millions just because the defendant was representing himself?
6. Have you heard the term "lawfare"—the idea that lawsuits are used to punish or silence political opponents—and do you believe that happens?
7. Have you ever shared or strongly supported a theory that many people might call an outside-the-mainstream belief?
8. Do you think journalists, bloggers, or people who post online are being silenced or held back because they are afraid of getting sued?
9. Have you ever felt that people avoid speaking out—even if they believe something is true—because of the risk of a lawsuit?
